

Literacy and Language Arts Expert, Diane Frankenstein 5-8 March, 2018

Topic: Conversational Reading

“Don’t count books, count conversations; what matters is not how many books your child/student reads, it’s how many conversations she has about them”. Learn the art of ‘conversational reading’ from the lady who coined the phrase herself, Diane Frankenstein.

Conversational Reading follows a simple equation:
Read a Book, Ask a Question, Start a Conversation

In our hectic schedules and media saturated world, reading with our children and talking with them about what matters, is more important than ever before. The goal of Conversational Reading is to promote thinking and reflection. Unlike standard question-and-answers, the questions found in books, help to jump start conversations that are important to children.

It’s less about what you know and more about what you think.

Topics covered include: self-esteem, bullying, friendship, boasting and being true to yourself.
